

A-State Celebrates Homecoming

Kirk Louis, a freshman from Baton Rouge, La., carries the American Flag onto the field before the Homecoming game on Oct. 3 at Centennial Bank Stadium. The Red Wolves triumphed over the Vandals, winning 49-35.

Sarah Thompson | Staff Photographer

Kaily Nix, 2015 Homecoming Queen, shares a smile with 2014 Homecoming Queen Ellen Hackenwerth after her crowning. This year's Homecoming King is Jonathan Freeman.

Sarah Thompson | Staff Photographer

Aundrea Allen | Staff Photographer

Along with the "Yell Like Hell" spirit competition held by SAB, A-State Athletics held a bonfire that warmed people up on the chilly Thursday evening.

Nikki Logan | Staff Photographer

Enthusiastic A-State students sport their favorite war paint at the "Yell Like Hell" competition and bonfire held Thursday at University Loop and Honors Avenue.

Sarah Thompson | Staff Photographer

The Black Student Association performs for the judges during the "Yell Like Hell" in front of the LLC. Students also enjoyed free food at this year's "Yell Like Hell" competition.

Denise Goldstein | Staff Photographer

Zeta Tau Alpha sisters do a flip over during their Step Show routine on Sept. 28.

Kyle Fouts | Staff Photographer

Hannah Aldridge, a contestant in the Homecoming Hero's costume competition, carries a sign promoting St. Jude's Up 'Til Dawn fundraiser.

Arkansas State University celebrated Homecoming Week Sept. 28-Oct 3. Homecoming Week consisted of many student-lead activities and events including a Step Show featuring A-State sororities, a bubble ball tournament in the Red Wolf Center, and tailgating parties hosted by each college and local businesses. The week ended Saturday with the crowning of the Homecoming Queen (Kaily Nix) and King (Jonathan Freeman), and a victory by the Red Wolves over the Idaho State Vandals. To check out more photos from last week's Homecoming events, go to The Herald website at www.astateherald.com.