

Think Pink!

Melissa Martin | Staff Photographer

Hailey Hawkins, junior communications disorders major of Pocahontas, and Haiden Jeter, freshman nursing major of Lonoke, both members of Zeta Tau Alpha, pass out "Think Pink" ribbons during the A-State football game on Oct. 20.

October is observed as Breast Cancer Awareness Month. There are many events sponsored to bring breast cancer awareness to the forefront and the battle thousands of women and men embark on every year. This month also celebrates and honors the memories of the brave women and men who have suffered, fought and are still fighting breast cancer worldwide. A-State's Zeta Tau Alpha brought some of the events to campus with their "Think Pink" week. Some of these events included the pink out football game to honor breast cancer survivors, a "Pink your Porch" contest where all the fraternity and sorority houses decorated their houses in pink. ZTA ended the week with a "Pink Party" for many little girls and their mothers in the Northeast Arkansas area. To see more pictures from the "Think Pink" week go to The Herald's website at astateherald.com.

Emily Holder | Staff Photographer

Breast cancer survivors prepare to take the field during halftime to release pink balloons in honor of those who have or who are currently battling the disease.

Sarah Thompson | Staff Photographer

Kylie Broadaway, sophomore radiology major from Jonesboro, paints faces during the Pink Party at the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority house.

Chelsea Hays | Photo Editor

Alpha Gamma Delta house won the Zeta's "Pink Your Porch" competition during the Think Pink Week which ran from Oct. 18- 23.

Emily Holder | Staff Photographer

Zeta Tau Alpha members head toward the Centennial Bank Stadium before the football game to hand out pink ribbons to raise Breast Cancer Awareness.